Such personal data may broadly be grouped into the following cathegories;

- identification data, such as name, and address;
- communication details, such as e-mail or phone number.

We may engage other parties to provide IT, logistic, and other administrative support (e.g, parties who provide distribution services or software/IT support). Those parties may have access to the personal data to the extent necessary to provide such services.

From time to time, we may provide personal data between companies within the Essity Group, or to Essity agents, if required to ensure compliance with legal requirements or to respond to requests from authorities. Personal data may be provided to parties that are located outside the European Economic Area ("EEA").

How long is personal data retained?

Personal data is stored by Essity or by other parties on our behalf, but only as long as necessary for the performance of our obligations and strictly for the time necessary to achieve the purposes for which the information was obtained. Personal data contained in contracts, communications, and business letters may be subject to statutory retention requirements, which may require a retention of up to 10 years. Longer retention periods may apply to back up copies of personal data that is done for security reasons. However, access to the personal data will then be highly restricted.

What are the rights of private individuals?

- Right of access: Private individuals have a right to ask whether or not we have personal data about them and, if that is the case, request information on what personal data we have. We will also have to respond to questions about inter alia why we are using personal data, details about what data we have and to whom we have provided access to the data. However, this is not an absolute right and the interests of other individuals may restrict the access rights.
- Right to rectification: We are required to rectify inaccurate personal data, or to complete personal data that is incomplete, on request.
- Right to erasure (right to be forgotten): We are in some circumstances required to erase personal data on request by the person concerned.
- Right to restriction of processing: We are in some circumstances required to restrict our use of personal data on request by the person concerned. In such cases, we may only use the data for certain limited purposes set out by the law.
- Right to data portability: Under certain circumstances, private individuals may have the right to receive their personal data to which we have access, in a structured, commonly used and machine-readable format and such persons may then have a right to transmit those data to another entity without hindrance from us.
- Right to object: In some cases, private individuals are entitled to object to our use of their personal data. We may then be required to stop using the personal data. One example when this might apply is when personal data is used for marketing and profiling purposes (this is however not the purpose in this case).

Further information or respond to requests to exercise the rights described above may be sent to Essity at the following e-mail address: dataprivacy@essity.com
